Objective

PROVIDE INTERNATIONAL MANAGEMENT EDUCATION FOR GRADUATES OF BUSINESS

The objective of the Masters in International Management program is to equip graduates with the competence, skills, and know-how to be effective in international managerial and executive roles. The program aims to develop the analytical, research, communications, decision-making and problem-solving skills required by the graduate to perform effectively and in a socially-responsible manner in today's fiercely competitive and global marketplace. Attainment of these skills will facilitate career advancement in the field of international management.

The Masters in International Management is taught in English in two countries, and combines theory with managerial insights. Upon graduation, the participants will have acquired the knowledge and skills needed to take on positions with companies operating in an international management environment.

The International Partnership of Business Schools (IPBS) is a consortium of leading business schools located in Europe and North America. The program is targeted at students who already have an economics or business degree. The study period is 12 to 15 months. Students spend Study Block 1 at either Reims Management School or Northeastern University, Boston MA, or Universidad De Las Americas Puebla, before going on to complete Study blocks 2 and 3 at either ESB Business School, Reutlingen, Dublin City University or Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore, Piacenza.

Testimonials

"Having completed an M.A in International Business at La Sorbonne University Paris in July 2006, I decided to look for an interesting, international and compact high level Master's course that would help me jump into active life as best as possible through a more practice oriented program than the one I previously had.

I had heard about the MSc program at RMS/DCU from some friends who were already at RMS. A Master's which offers a compact one year MSc program in two countries sounded to me like a good chance to further enhance my knowledge in such fields as strategic management, human resources, marketing and business statistics, to name but a few. The courses at Reims and Dublin offered a great variety of topics. They were well organized and provided students with up-to-date business knowledge. The international environment offered a great learning experience due to the various personalities and methods involved, all of which were put to the test through group presentations involving up-to-date case studies and individual papers. After the second term ended, I began my Master's thesis term.

I am glad I chose this MSc program which was not only a door opener for my current professional position, thanks notably to the reputation of the schools, but has also allowed me to build some extraordinary and hopefully lasting friendships."
